Dear Mr. Bagnall:

The earliest reservation [redacted] was able to obtain was for Saturday, 25 Sept on the [redacted] which was the only available space in the near future. This is an extra-fare train, but in view of your desire that he be there as soon as possible, even by 20 September, he has paid the extra fare himself and received a statement from the Railway ticket clerk that this was the only transportation he could obtain at this time. In case you foresee difficulty in his receiving reimbursement for this extra fare, any help you can give in advance will be appreciated. His train will arrive in Washington sometime Tuesday and he expects to report to you by Wednesday morning.

In reply to the question in your letter of 20 Sept. on [redacted] plans, she states that she wishes you to go ahead on arrangements with placing her on LWOP status in ORE.

In regard to my plans, you no doubt received my resignation sent you last week.

The documents were received with the carton open, torn and in bad condition; it was not insured. Fortunately, no library eyes saw the carton and the materials seemed to be intact. [redacted] has not completed his check but I requested that on Monday he furnish us with a statement of clearance.

We have now heard from the communications people and will comply with their instructions shortly.

Our final survey is still in process but will be completed by next week.

We just received the Supply Division's letter of 22 Sept. covering the transfer of office equipment, but we will not ship this until the Deputy Chief, FDB arrives since we will need the safe. ^{until then.} It is assumed he will also instruct us on the return or disposition of our correspondence files.

For your information, inclosed is a copy of a letter sent to [redacted] on where to address [redacted] or myself after the project terminates.

Sincerely,
